Customers Crowding To a Side Street Business Place

BY MR. MUNNIMAKER

The Famous Profit-Wizard of the Standard Classified Advertising Columns.

"There is one thing of enormous importance and inestimable business advantage in the Market Place of the Munnimakers (the classified ads of the Standard, that I wish I could emphasize more strongly on the minds of the business community, and even of individuals, who are readers of the Standard," said Mr. Munnimaker, the famous Profit-Wizard of the Standard, yesterday, in conversation with a caller at the Standard office.

"Did you ever stop to realize that the keynote of the whole classified section of the Standard is value? It is not location. It is not the fact that your business place is on a main street or on a side street. There isn't any question of whether you have pretty show windows, or whether you are on the second or third floor. The whole question, in the Market Place of the Munnimakers, is the value that you give, the attractiveness of your offers, the way you do business, and the kind of services you render, to your customers. Now, what I want to emphasize is, when you advertise in the Market Place of the Munnimakers, your location is no obstacle to building up a business. No matter if you are on a side street, even if you are pretty far off the main travel, nevertheless people will hunt you up and come to you. Even if you are in the second or third story and not even in the front of a business building, you can draw people straight to your office or your services. And, on the other hand, you may even be on a main street, where thousands of people are passing every day, and still hardly ten out of a thousand will know they are passing your store, or will know what kind of goods or values you have inside. The best and easiest, and surest way to make them know where you are, and to make them learn how to get there, is to draw them to your store by means of an attractive offer made to

Mr. Munnimaker, who, as is well known, is the presiding spirit of the Standard classified columns—is al-ways at the service of any individual or any business man or business woman, who desires to consult him. Just ring telephone No. 56, the Standard office, and speak to Mr. Munnimaker.
